

Brabus CLS Rocket Strengthens Its Position As World's Fastest Street-Legal Sedan

{mosgoogle right}I ran across this story yesterday but unfortunately due to limited time constraints I wasn't able to publish it. As you may remember, back in June Brabus and their 730 horsepower V12-powered Mercedes CLS Rocket set out on a mission: to become the world's fastest street-legal sedan. The result was a top speed test run that boasted an incredible maximum velocity of 225.19 mph, fast enough to make the CLS Rocket the new king among luxury supercars. Not a group known to rest on their laurels, Brabus engineers felt the CLS Rocket was capable of more, more than even the aforementioned record-setting mark. So they set out again, venturing to the Nardo high-speed track in the South of Italy where they would once again try to improve on their already impressive achievement.
