

Rumor Of The Day: S-Class Convertible To Launch At Detroit Auto Show

{mosgoogle right}Adding to the Mercedes S-Class convertible speculation that's been building since back in June, Automobile magazine today is reporting that yes, the model is still set to debut at the Detroit Auto Show next month. According to the publication, an industry source close to the project says production is planned. The article then goes on to elaborate that the model would be based on the S600, and would likely carry a $10K - $15K higher price tag than the traditional V12-powered model.
