First Photos Of The New Smart ForTwo?

{mosgoogle right}While browsing our good friend Vincent's website Autoblog.nl this morning we stumbled upon photos that appear to display the new 2007 smart fortwo without any body-cladding, masking, or other forms of stealthery. Although I can't vouch for their validity, the vehicle pictured is indeed strikingly similar to smart sand sculpture; everything from its modified tridion safety cell to its simplified rear tail lights. Of course, the possibility that the photos have been touched up or modified in some way still remains, so if the production version looks slightly different than the vehicle pictured before you, consider yourself warned...

Â

Read moreÂ