

2011 Mercedes-Benz A-class concept

On this years 2011 Auto Shanghai Mercedes-Benz revealed their new vision about the A-class line. The 2011 Mercedes-Benz A-class concept is with radically changed design and idea.

The new baby Benz looks more like a sports car and it's turbocharged four-cylinder engine taken from the M270 supports it. The 155kW engine is equipped with a transmission deemed to be sporty, economical and comfortable.

{mosgoogle left}The interior of the Mercedes A-class concept is also quite futuristic. There are no edges and everything is round and wavy. The large glass roof opens a view to the sky, creating a more roomy and airy atmosphere.

As in every new car, the 2011 Mercedes-Benz A-class concept is filled with technological innovations like the collision preventing radar system also seen in some of the newest Volvo models.

Here is the 2011 A-class concept Gallery